INTRODUCTION

EUROPEAN YOUNG LEADERS (EYL40) PROGRAMME

The European Young Leaders (EYL40) programme led by Friends of Europe is a unique, inventive and multi-stakeholder programme that aims to promote a European identity by engaging the continent's most promising talents in initiatives that will shape Europe's future.

The European Young Leaders represent a promising European leadership from all over the continent and with a wide variety of backgrounds including politics, business, civil society, academia, arts, science and the media.

From trailblazing biochemists to budding political leaders, and from dot-com entrepreneurs to NGO 'stars' who are shaping the social and environmental policies of tomorrow, the European Young Leaders are a unique community that crafts innovative responses to European challenges and positively affects the lives of future generations.

Every year, they meet during two 3-day seminars that take place in symbolic European cities, joined by decision-makers, stakeholders and key European actors, to discuss issues of common concern and develop concrete proposals and recommendations to tackle the challenges facing Europe and its citizens.

The relaxed tone and out-of-the-box nature of the European Young Leaders (EYL40) programme have brought about salient and open discussions that have facilitated the development of a strong network of committed Europeans.

This programme also turns ideas into actions. That means ongoing interactions between young leaders, alumni and outside participants to boost innovative ideas and have a bigger impact on the European stage by forwarding projects that matter to the community.

The 2017 Autumn seminar in Tallinn also increased the programme's outreach by inviting North American and Middle East and North African (MENA) Young Leaders to join the discussions for the first time. The aim is to create synergies, promote structural dialogue and foster better mutual understanding between established leaders from the three regions and develop an inter-regional, multidisciplinary network of alumni to support the leaders of tomorrow.

Building on this successful programme, Friends of Europe is planning to launch a parallel initiative in 2020, for which we will bring together a selection of Young Leaders from the Western Balkan region.

Friends of Europe is a leading think tank that connects people, stimulates debate and triggers change to create a more inclusive, sustainable and forward-looking Europe.

CONNECT

Friends of Europe is an independent think tank with a difference – we believe innovation is a mindset, behaviour and action. We aim to be catalysts for change and believe that real solutions come from transforming mindsets through the confrontation of ideas and the breaking down of silos between politicians, businesses and civil society.

Believing that change is achieved through inclusive policies and action, we reach out to and work with a wide network of policymakers, international organisations, civil society representatives, business leaders, academics, the media and citizens across Europe and beyond.

We have no national or party political bias and ensure that all viewpoints are represented in our activities and publications.

DEBATE

We foster open, insightful and provocative debates to stimulate fresh ideas and creative thinking.

Our portfolio of events and reports means that Friends of Europe contributes ideas and leads the debate on a wide range of EU-related issues, including:

Climate & Energy | Health | Asia, Africa and Emerging Economies | Digital, Skills & Inequalities | Peace, Security and Defence | Migration and Integration | Citizens' Europe

Our European Young Leaders (EYL40) programme connects Europe's most promising talents, and our Board of Trustees brings together the knowledge and experience of European leaders who include Presidents, Prime Ministers, European Commissioners and Presidents of the European Parliament.

The Development Policy Forum (DPF), the Asia programme and the Europe-China Forum build bridges to foster global partnerships. With our EU-Africa High-Level Group high-level we help craft a new narrative for a modernised and prospect-oriented Africa-Europe relationship.

Europe's World, our policy journal, is the only pan-European publication which offers a unique insight into the views of leading policymakers and opinion-makers on European and global challenges.

Our online platform Debating Europe encourages citizen-led debates with policymakers. In less than five years, it has built up a 4.3m-strong community of citizens across Europe and over 272,000 social media followers who put their questions to high-profile decision makers.

CHANGE

We offer Europe's citizens an opportunity to take an active transformational role in shaping their environment. We use ground-breaking online brainstorming to bring different stakeholder groups together from all over the world and constantly innovate in how we convene and shape discussions. Through our debates, conferences, working groups, reports and recommendations we provide bold and ambitious but practical solutions for a more inclusive, sustainable and forward-looking Europe.

Friends of Europe in figures:

- 5000+ senior participants and speakers
- 60 events
- 50 publications and over 200 op-eds published
- a growing 4.3 million strong online community on our online discussion platform Debating Europe
- 1.120m unique visitors to its websites

Not only has our world been changing at a rapid rate, but the rate of change itself has also grown significantly faster over the past two centuries. This accelerating change has a critical impact on our society. It has become increasingly apparent that the countless manifestations of science and technology pervading our world are intrinsically linked to the social, economic and cultural outlooks of societies and individuals alike.

Ten years ago, artificial intelligence sounded like science fiction, and its prevalence in political discourse was barely perceptible. Today, however, AI has a fixed place in our reality, massively impacting all aspects of our daily lives. Code-driven systems have spread to more than half of the world's inhabitants in ambient information and connectivity, offering previously unimagined opportunities and unprecedented threats.

Though we live in an ever-developing world, the linear nature of humans — and structures that were built for a different era — have not changed. The technological revolution has coincided with surging inequality, populism and debt. Additionally, we are being increasingly confronted with the devastating effects of climate change, ones that demand urgent and drastic solutions. The inadequacy of governmental responses to counteract threats related to climate change and the negative effects wrought by globalisation has left its citizens sceptical of politics and the future.

A new political leadership cycle is on the horizon as the world faces major demographic changes. The millennial generation is impatiently awaiting a change in the current leadership dynamic; it is estimated that by 2025, millennials will comprise three-quarters of the global workforce. The population tidal wave predicted to strike Africa and Asia in the coming decades will completely reshape the global economy. In the meantime, on the European level, the policy choices that will be made by the new EU mandate will profoundly impact Europe for the foreseeable future.

This crossroad undeniably offers opportunities. There is a strong desire for a new political structure and a new type of leadership: one that is more agile, less linear and is able to keep up with the pace of change, both in the short and long term. This is a chance for both Europe and for European leaders to play a prominent role in this transition, to advocate a long-term vision and to be a force of positive strength in these volatile times. How can Europe govern smarter by using a new form of effective leadership? What critical skills and abilities do leaders need in today's unpredictable world? How can Europe take the lead in bringing about imperative change, especially when it comes to climate change?

This Barcelona seminar is the second of a series of meetings forming the foundation of the 2019 edition of the European Young Leaders programme. Its themes have been chosen to reflect the core work of Friends of Europe for this year and the years to come.

LOCATION

The first day of proceedings will be held at the Barcelona Museum of Contemporary Art (MACBA). Located amongst some of Barcelona's oldest streets and buildings, the museum's modernist exterior offers a striking contrast to its surroundings.

12.30—13.20 Welcome buffet lunch

SCENE SETTINGTEACHINGS FROM PAST TIMES

13.50-14.45 Putting change in perspective

For this session, Dominique Moïsi will share his perspective on today's societal issues and the ever-accelerating pace of change. His extensive experience in European politics and world geopolitics will provide the basis for discussing the importance of today's shifts and how they compare to those from the past.

Having co-founded the Institut Français des relations internationales, Dominique is a household name thanks in part to his regularly published op-eds, essays and books.

15.15-16.30 Europe's 5-year forecast succeeding the European elections

After lots of heated discussions following Brexit on the importance of the European project, it was up to the European population to voice their verdict in May of this year. These elections are not always seen as the most engaging, as the various workings of the European Union are often perceived as impenetrable and undemocratic. But one of the biggest surprises of this year's elections was the resurgence of voter interest. Turnout across the bloc surpassed 50 percent, a major jump from the 2014 election, in which just 42.6 percent of eligible voters took part.

And the European elections really do matter—over the past decades, an alliance of the centre-right and centre-left have held a comfortable majority in the Parliament, which has resulted in their assignment into key positions in the European Council and European Commission. With these elections, the voters have decided to give more seats to smaller, more passionate parties like the Greens and a variety of populist groups. Given the declining support for centre parties throughout Europe, rising populists on both the left and right have been provided with an opportunity to advance in European politics. The feared populist wave was more of a large ripple, but populists did very well in major countries where they are in power, like Italy, Hungary and Poland, which invites reflection on a number of questions.

What can we learn from both the campaign and the outcome of the European elections? What are the biggest concerns of European citizens? What is the effect of the outcome of the European elections on the existing power balance? What will this entail for the course of the European Union going forward?

‘TAXES, TAXES, TAXES – THE REST IS ALL BULLSH*T’

The effect of tax on welfare and inequality

The above title is a quote from historian Rutger Bregman, spoken at this year’s Davos meeting in response to the global elite’s attempt to solve inequality through philanthropy. Although his language is colourful, the Dutchman does have a point: when talking about inequalities and the ever-growing gap between rich and poor, taxation is not a component that can be ignored. Economists consider, based on the statistics taken from tax havens such as Bermuda or Ireland, that 40% of multinational companies’ profits avoid taxation. EU member states and developing countries are the main victims of this method: Europe loses 20% of its corporate taxes.

Current tax regulation is not only bewildering and outdated, but it also contains lots of loopholes, making taxation un-transparent, unfair and more prone to tax evasion. Offshore Leaks, Lux Leaks, the Panama and the Bahamas Papers are some examples of scandals well-known for having exploited secretive offshore tax regimes.

The power to tax is in the hands of the member states, with the EU having only limited competence. But are current tax policies, designed at a time when the nation-state was all-powerful, still appropriate now that globalisation is rapidly eroding national borders? How can we create a transparent tax framework and make sure that everyone pays their fair share?

PLENARYTHE AGE OF EMPOWERMENT

11.15- 12.45

And the demand of a new type of leadership

We live in the age of the empowered individual. New technologies have empowered citizens not only as consumers but also as political actors. New grassroots leaders are bypassing traditional hierarchical institutions, instead using new technologies and social media to focus the interest of the public on their agendas and activities and, in doing so, have reached a huge global audience. These new leaders often challenge the current power balance and advocate for political, social and organisational change.

This new type of leader seems to be stepping into the ever-growing public trust-gap between government and citizens. As a result of citizens becoming more distrustful, political participation has declined and governments find it difficult to command the legitimacy and respect to govern effectively for the greater good. The lack of effective governance creates in turn further distrust, capturing this relation in a downward spiral. Additionally, we are being increasingly confronted with the devastating effects of climate change, demanding urgent and drastic solutions. The traditional hierarchy of the representative democracy, based on an elite of decision-makers, is thus increasingly struggling to survive in a very complex and volatile world. The era of political consent is vanishing, not only within the political arena, but also in stepping outside of traditional structures. The new incoming generation is facing a tipping point; a new form of leadership needs to emerge in order to put the way we manage our societies and climate change back on track.

What place can we offer the empowered individual within the new power balance? What kind of leadership is needed to create the consensus and uniformity that is needed to move forward in a hyper-individualised society? Is there a need for decentralisation or a centralisation of power? How can leaders address social discord, division, distrust and loss of control?

PARALLEL SESSION I THE FUTURE OF CONSUMERISM

13.45- 15.00 How to re-shape the consumer economy

Key shifts in economics, demographics, technology and media are completely transforming the consumer landscape, and with it, the essence of how we buy. Who the consumer is, in addition to how, where, and even why they shop, is changing rapidly. The way our stores, shopping streets and public spaces look is undergoing constant change. Mobile technology, social commerce, location-based services, big data and a flood of other technologies on the rise are influencing the consumer even more and bridging the gap between the product and the buyer.

On the other hand, consumers are increasingly aware of their negative impact on the planet and seeking to engage with ethical brands to appease their guilt and limit the harm they inflict on the environment. A new wave of ethical start-ups is emerging, actively challenging consumer expectations of what a 'good' brand is. Larger existing brands are stepping up too.

In addition, a number of subscription-based services are changing the relationship between the product and the buyer, as the customer must pay a recurring price at regular intervals for access to a product or service such as Amazon Prime, Netflix, and Spotify, among others. The subscription model is a booming field. In recent years, this market has increased from $57 million in sales in 2011 to $2.6 billion in 2016.

What is needed to cope with all of these transformations? How do we make sure that the emergence of the conscious consumer does not succumb to greenwashing or disillusion? As more businesses move to a subscription-based model, should we be worried about data privacy and unconscionable contracts that result in debts?

PARALLEL SESSION II THEME PARK EUROPE

13.45- 15.00

How to move from tourism floods to sustainable travel

Tourism is one of the world's fastest growing industries. As an export category, tourism currently ranks fourth globally after fuels, chemicals and automotive products. For decades, countries and cities have been trying to attract as many tourists as possible, but more and more destinations are reaching a tipping point often referred to as over-tourism.

The nature of tourism has changed from being a service industry, offering flights and hotels, into providing personal experiences like adventure, rejuvenation and fulfilment. More than 3 in 4 millennials, for example, would choose to spend money on 'making memories' over something material. As cities are transformed into theme parks that cater solely to these experiences, locals have begun to protest. A number of destinations have essentially become too popular for their own good, resulting into anti-tourist protests in cities such as Barcelona, Amsterdam and Venice.

Ada Colau, who in June 2015 was decisively voted in as Barcelona's mayor, followed through on early promises to cut down on visitor numbers to the capital, something that city residents rated second only to unemployment as Barcelona's biggest problem. In 2017, the city adopted a law that pledged to limit the number of beds available in hotels and tourist apartments. With global tourist numbers estimated to increase at an even faster rate, over-tourism will become a bigger and bigger issue. As a result of a lack in regulation, governments have been powerless to deal with the overwhelming influence of global tourism platforms such as Airbnb and TripAdvisor.

How can governments, businesses and individuals take responsibility for overcrowding? How can authorities and industry join forces to manage the growth of the sector in a sustainable way?

B(L)OOMING EUROPEAN INNOVATION

Creating the optimal conditions

Becoming a champion in innovation will create value for all Europeans, generating new jobs, better products and services, while at the same time creating a more competitive European economy. How can we develop effective collaborations and strategies in order to support smart, sustainable and inclusive innovations? How can we tap into our innovative potential to tackle societal challenges? How can we create people-centered innovation, which creates a participatory, practice-based process to find sustainable new strategies for a social and green future?

This session will consist of five breakout groups, headed by European Young Leaders, that will brainstorm on how to turn Europe into a global innovation lab. What policies and programmes will Europe need for long-term prosperity and sustainability? How can we best devise a broad, cross-sectoral innovation policy? What should be done differently for the next EU Framework Programme? How can Europe's innovation help deliver a climate-neutral economy?

The objective of this session is to come up with ten clear and practical policy recommendations to create optimal conditions to further b(l)oom European innovation and (social) entrepreneurship, which would be signed by the next generation of European leaders.

GROUP ACTIVITY

THE INNOVATION EXCURSION

11.30 - 12.45 During this part of the programme, the group will visit Barcelona's El Raval neighbourhood for a walking tour. El Raval has a seedy history, as delinquency, prostitution, and heroine deals reigned supreme during the medieval era. The government decided to 'clean-up' El Raval in the 90s and cracked down on prostitution and drug dealing to make space for new public squares.

But even today, given that the area is located just next to the popular La Ramblas street, there is a stark contrast between the rich tourists on the one hand and the much poorer locals on the other hand. In response to gentrification, tourism and cultural diversity, local citizens have started countless projects to breathe new life in the neighbourhood and create dialogue amongst the different communities.

The group will experience the neighbourhood with the help of a surprising guide from Hidden City Tours. This social start-up offers walking tours of Barcelona with one big difference: they exclusively employ guides who are homeless. Their alternative El Raval tour will take us through the daily life of a person who lives on the streets of Barcelona from where they sleep, wash, change clothes and eat to how they look for work.

12.45 - 13.15 We will close the tour at our venue for the afternoon, the Bellucci Studios, where the founder of Hidden City Tour, Lisa Grace, will give a short presentation followed by a Q&A about her project.

LOCATION

The last part of the programme will be in the Bellucci Studios, which used to be home to the prestigious Figaro Films production company.

WHAT'S NEXT?

13.15— 14.00 Since 2012, the European Young Leaders programme has steadily grown into what is a rich and resourceful network. The EYLs now comprise over 250 remarkable, diverse individuals. The ideas and initiatives born during these seminars have shown that innovative thinking can lead to positive change.

14.00 - 15.00 Lunch and farewell

OPTIONAL ACTIVITIES

In addition to the official programme, you will have the option to round off your trip with an informal post-seminar programme in Barcelona.

For those interested, a visit to the exhibition 'The Zone of Hope' will be arranged, which will make you travel in time to the year 2038, 2068 and 2093 and see what actually happens when we don't take action to tackle climate change. During the 30-minute journey, the visitors walk through several 3-D-generated hyperrealistic scenarios, feel hot and cold, and wind gusts, touch ice and watch powerful images that will help them understand what could happen to our most immediate environment as a result of climate change.

Afterwards, we will enjoy a casual dinner at beachside restaurant Carpe Diem.

SPEAKERS & MODERATORS

LERA BORODITSKY • Cognitive Scientist at the University of California San Diego

Lera Boroditsky is an Associate Professor of Cognitive Science at UCSD and Editor-in-chief of Frontiers in Cultural Psychology. She previously served on the faculty at MIT and at Stanford. Boroditsky is known for her research relating to cognitive science, specifically in how language affects the way we think and interact with the world. One of her main research topics focuses on how people with different linguistic backgrounds act and behave when exposed to certain events. She was named one of 25 Visionaries changing the world by the Utne Reader, and is also a Searle Scholar, a McDonnell scholar, a recipient of an NSF Career award and an APA Distinguished Scientist lecturer.

GEERT CAMI • Co-Founder & Secretary General at Friends of Europe

Geert co-founded Friends of Europe in 1999 and now mainly deals with its strategic development. He also focuses on the expansion and the activation of our vast network of senior political, corporate, media and societal contacts throughout the world, and coordinates the work of the Boards involved in the governance of the organisation. Since its launch, Geert also runs TownHall Europe, the Davignon Centre for New Leadership, next to the European Parliament in Brussels. Before that, Geert worked in ECHO at the European Commission, where he helped create and develop the then newly set-up Information and Communications Unit. Geert also headed the European conference organising, press relations and publishing company Forum Europe for more than ten years. At the outset of his career, Geert worked for 2 music programmes at Belgian public Radio 1, and very briefly as a teacher and TV journalist.

CRISTINA GALLACH • High Commissioner of the UN's 2030 Agenda for Spain

Cristina Gallach is currently High Commissioner for the 2030 Agenda of Spain. She served as the United Nations Under-Secretary-General for Communications and Public Information. Previously, she was spokesperson and Communication Director of Javier Solana during his mandates as NATO Secretary-General and as the EU High Representative for the Common Foreign and Security. In addition to these titles, she has been responsible for Equal Opportunities and has served as head of Public Relations in the Council of Europe. A journalist by profession, she possesses extensive expertise as a correspondent in conflict zones, the former Soviet Union and the European Union.

JAVIER GÁNDARA • Director General for EasyJet Spain

Javier Gándara is Country Director of EasyJet in Spain, Portugal and the Netherlands, and was appointed Chairman of the Airlines Association (ALA) in 2017. Prior to joining easyJet, Javier worked as Senior Manager for Operations for Spain and Portugal at FedEx. In 2007, he was named Operations Manager for easyJet in Spain, a title he held before his promotion to Country Director. Gándara works for the sustained growth of easyJet in Spain, which is a key market for the airline.

RYAN HEATH • Senior Political Editor at POLITICO

Ryan Heath is perhaps best known for his role as political editor at POLITICO Europe, where he was responsible for steering coverage on the 2019 European elections. Prior to this role, Heath authored POLITICO's Brussels Playbook column. Having accumulated over 20 years of experience in network television and radio, Heath has contributed to a diverse range of media outlets, such as the BBC, ABC, Euronews and NBC. Possessing skills not limited to journalism, Heath has lectured on European politics at the University of Oxford, LSE, Maastricht University and Université libre de Bruxelles.

DMITRI JEGOROV • Deputy-Secretary General for Tax and Customs Policy, Estonian Ministry of Finance

Dmitri Jegorov is the Deputy Secretary General for Tax and Customs Policy in the Estonian Ministry of Finance. Prior to this, he worked for the Estonian Tax and Customs Board. Jegorov's positions have included that of head of the tax department as well as Deputy Director General for all core processes ranging from customer service to criminal investigation.
